Subject : THE INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR RATIONAL RISK POLICIES

Gentlemen,
Having received the terms of reference of the "International Institute for Rational Risk Policies" and following the discussion with Jim and Paul last Friday, several new thoughts crossed my mind :

I know that Thorbjoern Malmfors has already formulated similar ideas as outlined in the B-M document.

2. Would he not be a good "Director General" for such an organisation ?
3. The seat could still be in Switzerland, if one felt that this was essential.
4. Rather than calling it an "Institute" - would "Academy" not be more to the point.

Marco and I have pondered over the matter and are not so optimistic that an attachment to a faculty would be an easy thing to achieve, particularly in Switzerland (political ramnifications) - and, in deed, there might be a considerable down-side associated with such a liaison.
Let's discuss.
Kind regards,
Helmut W. Gaisch
